The incredible life of Don Diego Stuno de la Vega

Also known as El Stuno or Don Stuno de Las Vegas, Don Diego Stuno de la Vega is an historical figure of California. Born on 7th February 1855 in Los Angeles, California, at the Stuno Motion Picture Corporation studios, El Stuno saved California from the dangerous dictator Rafael Nadal, an envoy and secret spy of the King of Spain, Alphonso El Marriachi.

El Stuno became famous first as a professional surfer at Malibu Beach. He soon after embraced a Jazz singer career and together with his friend Pablo Picasso, formed the band 'The Beatles on the rocks'.

Don Diego Stuno de la Vega is also known for being the first man to set foot on the planet Mars on 7th February 1955 as the Lead Astronaut and Chief Executive Officer of the unmanned mission Athena 18.

Below is a picture of the martian rover 'Insanity' on 7th February 1955, and some garbage left after their lunch by Astronauts Diego El Stuno and Johnny B. Good.

It is worth mentioning that El Stuno won the Nobel Prize in Physics in 1900 for his brilliant solution to the 3 body problem.

El Stuno first man on Mars

El Stuno, short for Don Diego Stuno de la Vega, became famous for being the first man to set foot on the planet Mars on 7th February 1955. Way before Neil Armstrong landed on the Moon, El Stuno was the Lead Astronaut and Chief Executive Officer of the unmanned mission Athena 18.

As a tribute to this spectacular achievement, here below is a picture of the martian rover 'Insanity' on 8th February 1955, the second day into the Athena 18 Mars mission, and some garbage left after their lunch by astronauts Diego El Stuno and Johnny B. Good.
